DAIRYMEN WIN BIG VICTORY

MOKENA PLANT OF BOWMAN CO., OPENED WEDNESDAY; BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE MAKES DONATION

The biggest milk strike which the Chicago dairy district has seen, was officially ended Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock when the Bowman Dairy Company and the Chicago Milk Dealers made a settlement with the Milk Producers Association representing 10,000 dairymen, agreeing to pay $2.67 1/2 cents per 100 pounds for milk at the bottling plants and $2.17 per can. The Bowman people offered to split the difference of 15 cents more which the dairymen had demanded so instead of a rate of $2.75 per 100 pounds of milk the agreement was made on the basis of $2.67 1/2 cents per 100 pounds. The Bowman Company at first refused to pay the 8 cents per 100 pounds premium which they have been paying to dairymen within a radius of 50 miles of Chicago, but after a long debate this company finally agreed to pay the premium in question, the final decision being reached early Wednesday morning. The dairymen claim they won a complete victory. They were not fighting so much for price only, as for recognition as a union. This point being gained the dairymen feel they have won a complete victory. The settlement effected is on a three months basis.

Soon as the price settlement was announced the Mokena plant of the Bowman company was placed in readiness to receive milk after being closed for two weeks. Part of the local force had been sent to the company's Chicago plant during the strike. They were recalled to the local plant and bottling operations were resumed Wednesday morning.

Some of the high spots in the big dairy strike during the past week have been as follows:

Donations of $1500 each received from Sears, Roebuck & Co., and International Harvester Company by the Milk Producers Association for the strike fund with the assurance that more would be forthcoming if needed. Dairymen favor patronizing these firms very liberally. Bank at Crystal Lake, one of Bowman's big strongholds contributed $250 to the strike fund. Other banks in the district contributed from $50 to $200 to this fund.

Many meetings were held all thru the district. Chicago was so hard up for milk that they offered Eastern Will County dairymen $5 per can, but had a hard time getting any.

Deputies from Sheriff's office searched truck drivers for guns at Frankfort but failed to find any.

The above is a brief summary of the high spots in the big milk strike during the past week.

C. M. Cleveland, the energetic Will County director for the Milk Producers Association announced a donation of $1500 each from the big mail order house of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and from the International Harvester Co., made to the Milk Producers Association strike fund. The bank at Crystal Lake, a Bowman stronghold, also donated $250 to the strike fund. Other banks in the district contributed $50 to $200. These donations were all voluntary and showed how the sentiment was in favor of the farmer.

Merchants in many of the towns in the district attended the meetings of the dairymen and offered their unstinted support to the strikink dairymen. The farmers were much impressed with these manifestations of good will and are going to throw all their trade to these firms.

The past week has been one of much activity, meetings being held in Manteno, Sollitt, Monee, Frankfort, Tinley Park and Orland. Hundreds of dairymen attended these meetings at which plans were perfected resulting in the final victory for the dairymen. On motion of Mr. Cleveland at one of these meetings, the dairymen agreed to furnish the Oak Forest Infirmary with milk so as to prevent suffering among the sick.

Various committees were appointed and were active in breaking up

MOKENA FEELS LACK OF MEETING PLACE

The milk strike which has just closed has forcibly shown the need of an adequate meeting place of some kind to accommodate large gatherings. Since the local hall has been rented by the month to a medicine show there was no place in Mokena in which the dairymen could meet. Consequently they held their meetings in Frankfort. Hundreds of farmers attended these meetings and naturally they patronized the Frankfort business people well. If Mokena could have provided the proper meeting place facilities, part of this trade could have been diverted to local business men, but it not being the case naturally Mokena lost this business. Another reason why Mokena should have more energy in it to boost the interests of the community.

the "bootlegging" of milk to Joliet and Chicago. A number of dairymen secretly shipped their milk out at night by truck and some even hauled it to Chicago in touring cars. The dairymen had perfected such a perfect patrolling system that this practise was soon broken up.

When the truck drivers found the supply of scab milk getting low they offered dairymen in the eastern part of Will County $5 a can for milk, but had a hard time getting any.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark of Frankfort, himself a dairyman, addressed dairymen meetings at Tinley Park and Frankfort Saturday afternoon and at Orland the same evening and again at Monee on Monday night. Over 200 dairymen attended a monster mass meeting at Frankfort Monday afternoon. The members perfected still more stringent plans to effectually shut off any supply of milk from this section reaching Chicago until the strike was settled. All the highways were carefully patrolled to stop any bootlegging of milk.

A number of exciting tilts took place between the striking dairymen and those dairymen who persisted in shipping their milk anyway. Last Thursday a report became current that large trucks were covering New Lenox and Frankfort townships and that each truck was manned with 4 armed men. Sheriff John Walker of Will County was notified and dispatched Deputies Jenco and Kozlowski to Frankfort. Truck drivers were searched for guns but none were found.

Not a drop of milk was delivered to the Bowman plant at Mokena during the strike. Sunday morning a dairy patrol caught a number of scabbing dairymen near Mokena who were trying to get some milk thru to truck drivers. A lively time ensued and the milk was eventually taken back.

It is said that if the strike would have lasted 24 hours longer the dairymen of Wisconsin and Indiana would also have walked out causing a complete tieup of the milk supply of Chicago. When the dealers saw what was coming they were ready to settle, but they died hard so to say.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

Last Sunday was a beautiful day and brought out a good attendance at the services. Because of the extreme cold of the week before the regular quarterly Communion service was postponed until last Sunday. We were very much gratified to note the fine spirit and ready response on the part of all present toward this beautiful and very sacred service. Practically all present knelt at the altar and renewed their confession of faith in Christ and his atonement by partaking of the Lord's Supper. It was a most beautiful sight and a spiritual blessing to all.

We are to have a real treat on next Sunday January 20. The Rev. Dr. E. G. Schultz, the new Superintendent of the Chicago Southern district of the Rock River conference will be with us and will preach at a public service at 3 P. M. Dr. Schultz succeeds Dr. Swift as superintendent of this district. Let us give him a large congregation and a very hearty welcome. A very cordial invitation is extended to the whole community. Come and join with us in worship and enjoy a good sermon.

The first local church conference will be held at the close of the afternoon service.

We will have the regular Sunday morning worship at 10:30. There will be no evening service. Please let as many members as possible and all officials be present at the conference.

"Sure!" said Pete. "We hain't no more sense than to let any one in, Clumb. Come in, the water's fine. We ain't proud!"

"Well," said Clumb, "if this feller is goin' to do school work of this kind, I want in the district, too."

"We'll come to that one of these days," said Jim. "The district is too small."

Wilbur Smythe's car stopped at the distant gate and honked for him—a signal which broke up the party. Haakon Peterson passed the word to the colonel and Mr. Bronson for a board meeting the next evening. The picnic broke up in a dispersion of staid married couples to their homes, and young folks in top buggies to dances and displays of fireworks in the surrounding villages.

Jim walked across the fields to his home—neither old nor young, having neither sweetheart with whom to dance nor farm to demand labor in its inexorable chores. He turned after crawling through a wire fence and looked longingly at Jennie as she was suavely assisted into the car by the frock-coated lawyer.

"You saw what he did?" said the colonel interrogatively, as he and his daughter sat on the Woodruff veranda that evening. "Who taught him the supreme wisdom of holding back his troops when they grew too wild for attack?"

"He may lose them," said Jennie.

"Not so," said the colonel. "Individuals of the Brown Mouse type always succeed when they find their environment. And I believe Jim has found his."

"Well," said Jennie, "I wish his environment would find him some clothes. It's a shame the way he has to go looking. He'd be nice-appearing if he was dressed anyway."

"Oh, then you haven't heard the news," said the colonel. "Jim's going to have his first made-to-measure suit for Ames. It's all fixed."

"Who's making it?" asked Jennie.

"Gustaf Paulsen, the Dane that's just opened a shop in town."

"A Dane?" queried Jennie. "Isn't he Bettina's uncle?"

"Ratherly," said the colonel jocularly, "seeing as how Bettina's Mrs. Hansen's daughter."

Clothes are rather important, but the difference between a suit made by Atkins, the tailor, and one built by Gustaf Paulsen, the new Danish craftsman, could not be supposed to be crucially important, even when designed for a very dear friend. And Jim was scarcely that—of course not! Why, then, did the county superintendent hastily run to her room, and cry? Why did she say to herself that the Hansens were very good people, and well-to-do, and it would be a fine thing for Jim and his mother—and then cry some more?

CHAPTER XVI

Jim Goes to Ames.

Jim had never felt more the upstart uneducated farm-hand than when he was introduced to that audience at Ames by Professor Withers, nor more completely disgraced than when he concluded his remarks. Even the applause was to him a kindly effort on the part of the audience to comfort him in his failure. His only solace was the look in Jennie's eyes.

"Young man," said an old farmer who wore thick glasses and looked like a Dutch burgomaster, "I want to have a little talk with you."

"This is Mr. Hofmyer of Pottawatomie county," said the dean of the college.

"I'm glad to meet you," said Jim. "I can talk to you now."

"No," said Jennie. "I know Mr. Hofmyer will excuse you until after dinner. We have a little party for Mr. Irwin, and we shall be late if we don't hurry."

"Where can I see you after supper?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

Easy it was to satisfy Mr. Hofmyer; and Jim was carried off to a dinner given by County Superintendent Jennie to Jim, the dean, Professor Withers, and one or two others—and a wonderfully select and distinguished company it seemed to Jim. Jennie seized a moment's opportunity to say, "You did beautifully, Jim; everybody says so."

"I failed!" said Jim. "You know I failed. I couldn't remember my speech. I can't stay here feasting. I want to get out in the snow."

"You made the best address of the meeting; and you did it because you forgot your speech," insisted Jennie.

"Does anybody else think so?"

"Why, Jim! You must learn to believe in what you have done. Even Con Bonner says it was the best. He says he didn't think you had it in ye!"

This advice from her to "believe in what you have done"—wasn't there something new in Jennie's attitude here? Wasn't his belief in what he was doing precisely the thing which had made him such a nuisance to the county superintendent? However, Jim couldn't stop to answer the question which popped up in his mind.

"What does Professor Withers say?" he asked.

"He's delighted—silly!"

"Silly!" How wonderful it was to be called "silly"—in that tone.

"I shouldn't have forgotten the speech if it hadn't been for this darned boiled shirt and collar, and for wearing a cravat," urged Jim in extenuation.

"You ought to 've worn them around the house for a week before coming," said Jennie. "Why didn't you ask my advice?"

"I will, next time, Jennie," said Jim. "I didn't suppose I needed a bitting-rig—but I guess I did!"

Jennie ran away then to ask Nils Hansen and Bettina to join their dinner party. She had a sudden access of friendliness for the Hansens. Nils refused because he was going out to see the college herds fed; but at Jennie's urgent request, reinforced by pats and hugs, Bettina consented. Jennie was very happy, and proved herself a beaming hostess. The dean devoted himself to Bettina—and Jim found out afterward that this inquiring gentleman was getting at the mental processes of a specimen pupil in one of the new kind of rural schools, in which he was only half inclined to believe. He thanked Jim for his speech, and said it was "most suggestive and thought-provoking," and as the party broke up slipped into Jim's hand a check for the honorarium. It was not until then that Jim felt quite sure that he was actually to be paid.

Mr. Hofmyer was waiting to give Jim the final convincing proof that he had produced an effect with his speech.

"Do you teach the kind of school you lay out in your talk?" he asked.

"I try to," said Jim, "and I believe I do."

"Well," said Mr. Hofmyer, "that's the kind of education I believe in. I do."

"I want to have a talk with you," Jim said.

"No," said Jennie. "I know Mr. Hofmyer will excuse you until after dinner. We have a little party for Mr. Irwin, and we shall be late if we don't hurry."

"Where can I see you after supper?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

Easy it was to satisfy Mr. Hofmyer; and Jim was carried off to a dinner given by County Superintendent Jennie to Jim, the dean, Professor Withers, and one or two others—and a wonderfully select and distinguished company it seemed to Jim. Jennie seized a moment's opportunity to say, "You did beautifully, Jim; everybody says so."

"I failed!" said Jim. "You know I failed. I couldn't remember my speech. I can't stay here feasting. I want to get out in the snow."

"You made the best address of the meeting; and you did it because you forgot your speech," insisted Jennie.

"Does anybody else think so?"

"Why, Jim! You must learn to believe in what you have done. Even Con Bonner says it was the best. He says he didn't think you had it in ye!"

This advice from her to "believe in what you have done"—wasn't there something new in Jennie's attitude here? Wasn't his belief in what he was doing precisely the thing which had made him such a nuisance to the county superintendent? However, Jim couldn't stop to answer the question which popped up in his mind.

—say German. What d'ye say to comin' down and teachin' our school? We've got a two-room affair, and I was made a committee of one to find a teacher."

"I—I don't see how—" Jim stammered, all taken aback by this new breeze of recognition.

"We can't pay much," said Hofmyer.

"You have charge of the dis-cip-line in the whole school, and teach in Number Two room. Seventy-five dollars a month. Does it appeal to ye?"

Appeal to him! And yet, how about the Simmses, Colonel Woodruff, the Hansens and Newton Bronson, now just getting a firm start on the upward path to usefulness and real happiness? How could he leave the little, crude, puny structure on which he had been working—on which he had been merely practicing—for a year, and remove to the new field?

"I'm afraid I can't," said Jim Irwin, "but—"

"If you're only 'fraid you can't," said Mr. Hofmyer, "think it over. I've got your post office address on this program, and we'll write you a formal offer. We may spring them figures a little. Think it over."

"You mustn't think," said Jim, "that we've done all the things I mentioned in my talk, or that I haven't made any mistakes or failures."

"Your county superintendent didn't mention any failures," said Mr. Hofmyer.

"Did you talk with her about my work?" inquired Jim, suddenly very curious.

"M'h-m."

"Then I don't see why you want me," Jim went on.

"Why?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

"I had not supposed," said Jim, "that she had a very high opinion of my work."

"I didn't ask her about that," said Mr. Hofmyer, "though I guess she thinks well of it. I asked her what you are tryin' to do, and what sort of a fellow you are. I was favorably impressed; but she didn't mention any failures."

"We haven't succeeded in adopting a successful system of selling our cream," said Jim. "I believe we can do it, but we haven't."

"Wal," said Mr. Hofmyer, "I d'know as I'd call that a failure. The fact that you're tryin' of it shows you've got the right ideas. We'll write ye, and maybe pay your way down to look us over. We're a pretty good crowd, the neighbors think."

CHAPTER XVII

Think of It.

Ames was an inspiration. Jim Irwin received from the great agricultural college more real education in this one trip than many students get from a four years' course in its halls; for he had spent ten years in getting ready for the experience. The great farm of hundreds of acres, all under the management of experts, the beautiful campus, the commodious classrooms and laboratories, and especially the barns, the greenhouses, gardens, herds and flocks filled him with a sort of apostolic joy.

"Every school," said he to Professor Withers, "ought to be doing a good deal of the work you have to do here."

"I'll admit," said the professor, "that much of our work in agriculture is pretty elementary."

"It's intermediate school work," said Jim. "It's wrong to force boys and girls to leave their homes and live in a college to get so much of what they should have before they're ten years old."

"There's something in what you say," said the professor, "but some experiment station men seem to think that agriculture in the common schools will take from the young men and women the felt need, and therefore the desire to come to the college."

"If you can't give them anything better than high-school work," said Jim, "that will be so; but if the science and art of agriculture is what I think it is, it would make them hungry for the advanced work that really can't be done at home. To make the children wait until they're twenty is to deny them more than half what the college ought to give them—and make them pay for what they don't get."

"I think you're right," said the professor.

"Give us the kind of schools I ask for," cried Jim, "and I'll fill a college like this in every congressional district in Iowa, or I'll force you to tear this down and build larger."

More nearly happy, and rather shorter of money than he had recently been, Jim journeyed home among the companions from his own neighborhood, in a frenzy of plans for the future. Mr. Hofmyer had dropped from his mind, until Con Bonner, his old enemy, drew him aside in the vestibule of the train and spoke to him in the mysterious manner peculiar to politicians.

A Doomed Partnership

By REV. H. OSTROM, L. D.

Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Their part.—Rev. 21:8.

These are lost men. In the great day of reckoning, sure to come, "they have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone."

Serious and forbidding as the statement is, who should dare to deny it?

The two words "their part" bring home to us at once the truth that the doom is a shared doom.

In the previous chapter we are told that the devil and the "beast" and the false prophet are cast in there.

And in this chapter from which our Scripture for today is taken, we read that, "the fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars," are cast in there. The sharing of the doom is thus set forth in plain terms—the one class' part and the other class' part!

We get our word partnership, so well understood in business, from the idea of co-ordinate investment and co-ordinate results. Two men in partnership are supposed to have a comparative interest in the business covered by the partnership. Each has a part. Now, must the man who is "unbelieving" be classified with the man who is an "idolater"? Must the man who is "fearful" be classified with "murderer"? Well, a lost man is a lost man, a guilty sinner is a guilty sinner! Sin harbored in the heart may appear in one person as adultery or as sorcery, and in another person as murder or as unbelief. It may appear in the same person at different periods as any of the awful list of deeds in this portion of Scripture. We may prefer to isolate ourselves and present ourselves as superior to this awful list. But all this terrible dividend is (as it were) from one corporation.

In our habitual estimate we may condone "unbelief" by giving credit to the normal activity of the intellect, we may condone "fear" by giving it to share with reverence. But real unbelief is the silent language of the heart declaring that God is not true. It "maketh him a liar." Real "fear" is that silent mood that calculates and devises but will not accept God's face value declaration that he cares for his own. Those baser (?) vices in the list all come from flying in the face of God's call and plan; and the very heart of unbelief and fear beats to that same order. They carry out "their part."

We cannot escape the awful inclusiveness of these words. To us they may seem to start at the bottom and run up the scale. But in God's sight they evidently spread out on a level. To let them tell their meaning to us is to shut us up condemned under sin. And if not saved we become individuals in that terrible inclusion.

If we condone any one of the list of offenses mentioned it may serve to give us popularity now, but there is our dreadful partnership.

More noticeable still may be to us that the "part" is with the devil, the beast and the false prophet. As in business there may be a silent partner, so here men may not imagine it but they are all the while working the plan of this vicious trio. Its leader, the devil, by bringing sin into the world accomplished that which classes every rejecter of salvation with his rebel designs. Would you picture that brilliant one in his vanity proposing to outdo God, and then picture yourself as having "a part" in his program? Rebellions and insurrections among men when human governments are involved in the issue must be small and impotent compared with a "part" in that daring deed of the devil. Many Bible students quite understand how that rebellion reaches out in the future to the beast and the false prophet, and how it is doomed. Such, too, must be the actual outlook of the man who has a "part," though it may be but an apparently silent part with that proud scheme.

Yet, it is the individual's part. It is not all his as if he had originated the scheme of rebellion. He has come into it. Thank God he can get out of it now. While it is day, he may withdraw. Too late he may look into the doom and say, "Which is my part?" But not so today. However, here as elsewhere in the Bible, "his part" is disentangled and separated so that it is his and his alone.

Soul, remember that this result is wages. Men earn it. They pay dearly for it. "The wages of sin is death." The present attitude of the soul rejecting Christ as Savior is personal. The result of it is also personal. "But the gift of God is eternal life." O soul, make that personal. You are invited to accept a partnership (let me say it reverently) with our Lord Jesus Christ and "his own."

That partnership! What is it? It is to "be like Him." It is to "be glorified together with Him." It is "because He lives to live also." It is to "overcome even as He has overcome." It is "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." Imagine the lost and "their part," then look on the saved and their reward, and choose.

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my household work. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S. C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Duke Called Canada Dreary Part of Globe
Edward Augustus, duke of Kent, and father of Queen Victoria, was stationed in Canada from 1797 to 1799, a part of the time in Halifax. In letters concerning the army in Canada, and addressed to Lord Melville, it appears that the duke disliked Canada, which he described as "this dreary corner of the globe," and in nearly every letter asked to be ordered home.
In one letter, dated from Halifax in 1799, the duke wrote: "You will receive at the same time with this an official letter from me on the subject of the force allotted for North America. I certainly flatter myself that I shall not remain here long enough to see the reinforcements arrive, for the last accounts, by the October mail, speak with so much confidence of the completion of the union at the meeting of the Irish parliament that with my reliance on Mr. Pitt's promise and your friendly exertions in my behalf, my hopes are very sanguine of being recalled."

Fastest Double-Star Found by Astronomer
The densest and fastest double-star known has been discovered by F. C. Jordan, famous American astronomer. The new star is composed of two stars. In rotating, the light from one is stopped by the other every six hours; that is, in six hours the stars of this doublet revolve around each other so as to eclipse.
This pair of stars, or this star composed of a pair, is three times denser than our sun and each is about the same size as the sun. The double-star is so far distant from the earth that it takes its light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, several years to reach the earth. In fact, if it died or disintegrated, it would be years before we knew it. For all we know we may not be looking at this star itself, but at its image of years ago. When we look at the stars we do not see them as they are today, but as they were when the light left them perhaps hundreds of years ago.—Detroit News.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Alaska Has Had Very Prosperous Year

WASHINGTON. — Nineteen twenty-three probably will stand out in Alaskan history as the most notable year in territorial history, Gov. Scott C. Bone declared in his annual report. Development was pushed at unprecedented speed, he said, with record production of wealth from various activities.
Governor Bone listed President Harding's visit and those of preceding and accompanying delegations of congressmen and press representatives as among the assets of incalculable value which had been added to the territory during the year.
Recommendations made in his report for 1922 were renewed by Governor Bone, among them being:
The placing of the affairs of Alaska under one department head at Washington and the substitution of a coordinated and centralized system of administration for the present inefficient bureaucratic system at the earliest possible date.
An appropriation of $300,000 to supplement a fund of $150,000 heretofore authorized for the erection of a capitol or administration building.
Adequate provision for the operation and upkeep of the Alaska railroad, and for the building of branch lines.
An appropriation of $1,500,000 annually for the building of roads and trails in the interior.
The vesting in the Department of Commerce of complete authority over the fisheries of Alaska.
The consolidation of all law-enforcing agencies in Alaska under the Department of Justice.
A colonization plan to be operative in connection with the Alaska railroad, with priority rights to lands freely granted to Alaska soldiers of the World war and their dependents.
Allotment of a fair percentage, at least one-half, of the net revenues derived from the Pribilof islands, which are in Alaskan waters, to the general fund of the territory.
The report says, among other things:
"The season of 1923, in bringing thousands of visitors to Alaska, emphasizes decidedly that a systematic development of tourist facilities offers great immediate opportunities for Alaska. The American and Canadian steamship lines carried 20,089 passengers to Alaska from January 1 to August 31, 1923. Of these it is estimated that two-thirds were transients or tourists and the number exceeds all records. The previous year 5,537 tourists came to Alaska.
"Alaska requires conservation—favors it and welcomes it, and gives steadfast support to every practical safeguard, existent or proposed, necessary to prevent reckless exploitation in any direction in the development of the territory."

Coolidge and Wallace Differ on Wheat

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE and his secretary of agriculture Wallace. Secretary Wallace in his report gave the following as chief features of his program:
Creation of an export corporation to buy surplus wheat and market it abroad, any loss incurred to be assessed against the entire crop of the following season.
A temporary reduction in freight rates of 25 per cent.
Creation of a commission to study freight rates with a view to a readjustment relieving the farmer of undue burdens.
Reduction in wheat acreage and diversification of crops by the farmer.
Reduction in taxes by the states on farm lands.
Secretary Wallace holds that the sale or gift of a substantial part of our surplus wheat to countries which are not able to buy, and which would, therefore, take it out of the ordinary channels of trade and competition, would unquestionably have a helpful effect upon domestic prices of wheat, provided larger tariff protection were given.
While the President said in his message that he believed it to be feasible to provide government assistance to exports, and urged that authority be given the War Finance corporation to grant liberal terms on loans for exports of fats and grains, he failed to give approval to the use of government funds for the direct purchase of wheat.

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Campbell in "Miss America" crown which she has won on two occasions.

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."
Her complete statement as given is as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be run-down, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty."
"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure."
"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—First of all, Find Good Health." The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womanhood, and I recommend it."
Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

Cost of the War.
Attempts have been made by a number of statisticians and economists to compute the money cost of the World war. The results arrived at vary. According to the estimates of Professor Bogart, under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the direct costs were $186,333,637,897, and the indirect costs $151,612,542,560, making a grand total of $337,946,179,637.
Money may not bring happiness, but it saves one a lot of worry.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.
In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.
Laxatives Aggravate Constipation
Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.
Why Physicians Favor Lubrication
Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.
Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Why Doctors Warn Against Coffee or Tea for Children

THE reason is simple. Coffee and tea contain drugs which tend to irritate the delicate nervous system of children, and so upset health.
The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among growing school children, the warning that "children should not drink tea or coffee at all."
Why confine the warning to children?
You are careful to protect the health of your children; why, then, take chances with your own health, when a change from coffee or tea is made so easy by Postum.
Postum is a delicious, pure cereal beverage—ideal for children and satisfying to adults.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

the Department of the Interior spends each year $250,000,000 of the taxpayers' money on account of past wars. This sum goes to the 256,918 soldiers and the 290,098 dependent survivors of soldiers of the wars from 1812 to and through the Spanish-American war. This is exclusive of another half billion which is being paid out by the veterans' bureau, an independent agency.
Total expenditures of the Interior department in the fiscal year 1923 were $354,623,069, larger than those for any other branch of the government except the veterans' bureau and the War department. The department has 5,551 employees in Washington, 1,200 of them at the Government Hospital for the Insane. The field force is 12,942, making a grand total of employees of 18,493.
The department, however, has one money-making branch. It is the patent office, which was transferred from the State department. It has revenues of nearly $3,000,000 a year, and expenditures are $300,000 less. The office employs 1,061 officials and clerks in Washington.

Governs the District

Among the bills were many that failed enactment in the last congress. The pure milk bill, clothing the District health officer with broad powers to safeguard the milk supply, was re-introduced by Representative Lampert.
Mr. Lampert also introduced a 5-cent car fare bill, a District suffrage bill, a measure which would make the rent law a permanent statute at least until May 22, 1926, when the President would have the discretion of either suspending or continuing the law, and a bill proposing that Lincoln's birthday be a legal holiday in the District.
The workmen's compensation bill for the District, which failed to pass in the Sixty-seventh congress, was re-introduced by Representative Fitzgerald of Ohio.
Representative French of Idaho introduced a bill for the protection of foodstuffs in the District, and Representative Smith of the same state a bill to regulate the practice of osteopathy in the District.

Most Effective Remedy for Intestinal Worms

From our experimental work, we have found the best treatment for worms is as follows: Make up a wet mash of bran or some similar ground feed and into this put some ordinary smoking tobacco; that is, the finely ground tobacco. This should be used at the rate of a pound to one hundred birds. Before giving the wet mash to the birds, I would starve them for a feeding or two, so that they will be sure to consume the mash. I would give two feedings, one each on successive days and then on the third day, follow this with some epsom salts, also dissolved and mixed in with a wet mash, at the rate of one pound of salts to one hundred birds. We have found this to be the most effective treatment for intestinal worms—H. Embleton, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

CHEERFULNESS

IT IS only when you make your departure from cheerfulness that you find the world is sour and dreary.

The sparkle then is gone from the sunshine, for the Lord of Day is hidden behind leaden clouds or curtains of clinging mists. And so it is with you, when your brightness of spirit and beaming countenance are obscured by somber thoughts which you have permitted to surround and come down upon you, without making any effort to walk in the light.

You are so uncomfortable and unhappy that everything on earth, your intimates and loved ones included, seems to have conspired against you to fill your cup with misery.

It is not while you are in such a state as this that you can at one stroke pull away from dejection, but you can at least make the effort. You have only to look on the happy faces of children to get the right sort of impulse and the proper strength to carry you through to the cheery land that everybody loves.

Or, perhaps, better still, gaze intently in your mirror and ask yourself the meaning of the frowns between your eyes and the hard, forbidding lines about your mouth.

If you will study these disfiguring marks very closely and thoughtfully, you will see they have no business there. You will observe, too, that they are spoiling your good looks.

They are ugly, repellant disfigurements which seem to say: "Keep away from me; I am a self-tormentor, and when in the mood I am now, I like to torment others."

How can you expect good fortune, good health and pleasing conduct if you continue to scowl and refrain from laughter?

Cheerfulness is often at the bottom of success. It has a great deal to do with health, not only of your body but of your spirit.

You who have overcome your old, melancholy, dismal self, will grant this with all your heart.

And you who are in the doldrums and doleful dumps will shut your mouth hard and say nothing.

But the likelihood is that, after sensible reflection, you will decide to take your place among the good-humored, smiling folk who are the folk who keep the world bright and sunny and contribute to its creature's their greatest happiness.

Now there is a great deal of difference between being chummy with your help and being on fine strong friendly terms with them. The laughers, of course, call friendliness chummyism! flavor much like venison. Fry four slices of bacon to a crisp, remove from the pan and add a small sliced onion; fry until brown. Trim four veal hearts, slice them, roll them in highly seasoned flour and fry in hot fat. Place the hearts in a hot casserole. Add to the fat in the pan one cupful of stock or water, a minced pimiento, a teaspoonful of salt and one-half a bay leaf. Pour the mixture over the hearts and cook two hours. Just before serving add the slices of bacon.

Casserole of Rice and Chicken.

Wash and boil one cupful of rice, drain in a colander. The rice should be tender but whole. Put a part of the rice in the bottom and around the sides of the casserole. Take one pint of cold cooked chicken and run it through the meat grinder. Mix it with three well-beaten eggs, three tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls each of chopped parsley and onion, a sprig of thyme with salt and pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly, add sufficient gravy or cream to make it quite moist. Mold the loaf to fit into the center of the casserole. Spread over the top the remainder of the rice, cover closely, and place in a moderate oven for an hour. Serve from the casserole with tomato sauce.

ALL BUT THE BRIDGES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY'VE built a road from Pickensville. They've graded up and dressed with gravel. A better route to Ryan's mill. A good hard road for folks to travel. They've straightened out a lot of bends. They've fixed it fitter than a fiddle. They've got it finished at the ends— They've got it done, all but the middle.

You cannot use the road as yet. There's still a lot of work to follow; For here and there you cannot get Beyond a creek, or through a hollow.

Yes, here and there a river flows. And you will see, when you have found it, There ain't no way nobody knows To get across it or around it.

Some people build their lives the same: They labor hard, make sure of riches, For gold and pleasure, friends of fame, Will help them over little ditches. And then some day they come upon A ragin' river, darkly flowin', And gold and fame and friends are gone, And floods are risin', winds are blowin'.

They build their lives without a God. Perhaps forget, may even doubt Him, When blue the sky, when green the sod, Get very well along without Him. And then the path dips down the vale, The way of life has left the ridges, And then they falter, then they fall— They build their road, all but the bridges.

"Modern" Women of Rangoon.

Women of the Orient have reached their greatest emancipation in Rangoon, the capital city of Lower Burma. In some respects she has outdone her Western sisters, for her street clothes are virtually those of the man, and he wears his hair long and carries a sunshade, as she does. DAWES' SPEECH OPENS INQUIRY

Chicago Banker Speeds German Quiz; Would Make Common Sense King.

Paris.—Brushing aside formality and European diplomacy in a speech characteristic of both his own personality and the country he represents, Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes started the reparations experts' investigation on its way by stating that the crux of the question before the committee was to "help Germany get well," saying:

"Any common-sense individual can estimate the distance a well man can run, but 50 medical experts gathered round the bedside of a dying patient will give 50 different estimates of how far he can run if he gets well." The reparations commission and the world, regarding the question of Germany's capacity to pay, thus far have been listening to medical experts. Let us first help Germany get well."

Emphasizing how he and his colleague, Owen D. Young, viewed the committee, General Dawes went on to say it was not their concern at the moment what Germany's capacity to pay had been, but her "present capacity and the courage of this committee to act."

General Dawes said that "all the world has seen the economic life of Germany ebbing away. With it the credit of all the European allies suffers, because the world realizes that if the Germans lose their capacity for work, Germany loses her capacity to pay reparations."

"The re-establishment of German productivity is the starting point of European prosperity," he said.

General Dawes then startled the European members of the commission by privately declaring:

"I propose to work day and night with you, and will take only half an hour for lunch—in fact, I will go without lunch if necessary. I shall expect the commission to do the same."

General Dawes had not spoken more than five minutes when he reached into his pocket and pulled out his famous briar pipe, which he puffed throughout the rest of his speech.

For candidness intermingled with moderation, nothing like General Dawes' opening speech had been heard in Europe since America withdrew from its affairs. The arbiter of this conference—for such he is acknowledged by even Poincare organs here—got right down to brass tacks. Nobody had expected such a speech. But, presiding just as he did over the budget situation in Washington, General Dawes, with the agents of every government in Europe hidden behind pillars and hanging on his words, said in reply to the usual formal European utterances of President Louis Barthou of the reparations commission that he and his associates had come here unprejudiced, not to discuss the legality of the occupation of the Ruhr, but to suggest a plan for the stabilization of German currency and the balancing of the German budgets.

House Insurgents Win Rule Test Vote; Affects Tax

Washington.—In the first test of strength in the fight to liberalize the house rules the old guard went down to defeat before a coalition of Democrats and insurgent Republicans. By a vote of 208 to 177 the house adopted an amendment offered by Representative Garrett (Dem., Tenn.), Democratic leader, repealing the so-called Underwood rule, put into effect by the Democrats ten years ago. This rule prohibited the offering of amendments on the floor to tariff and revenue bills unless they were germane to the particular section to which they were offered.

SAYS HIS PRESCRIPTION HAS POWERFUL INFLUENCE OVER RHEUMATISM

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allenhu, to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore instructed druggists everywhere to dispense Allenhu with the understanding that if the first pint bottle does not show the way to complete recovery he will gladly return your money without comment.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 20

MOSES CALLED TO DELIVER ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 3:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Moses,
when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.—Heb. 11:24, 25.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Moses, the Liberator.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Moses and the Deliverance From Egyptian Bondage.

After Joseph was dead, there was a change of dynasty (Exod. 1:8). The new king, noting the rapid increase of the Israelites, counseled the exercise of prudence lest when war broke out they join the enemy and fight against the Egyptians. One of the methods to curtail this increase was to enslave the people. Falling in that, an edict was issued that every male child should be drowned. While the oppression of God's people was heading up, God was providing a deliverer. Moses, that deliverer, was first trained at his mother's knee, then at Pharaoh's court and finally under God's immediate hand in the desert.

I. The Lord Spoke to Moses From the Burning Bush (Exod. 3:1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God enswathed in the very fire of God, or God dwelling in the midst of an elect people. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him he was the God of his fathers, the Covenant God. As soon as he knew it was God speaking to him, he hid his face.

II. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (Exod. 3:7-10).

1. God's Active Interest in His People (v. 7). In the preamble of this commission, God said to Moses, (1) "I have seen the affliction of my people"; (2) "I have heard their cry"; (3) "I know their sorrow."
2. God's Gracious Obligation to His People (vv. 8, 9). (1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians. (2) To bring them up out of the land. (3) To bring them into a "good land and a large."

3. God's Commission to Moses (v. 10). "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses. At any rate, he realized his unfitness to undertake such a task.

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (Exod. 3:11; 4:10).

1. Personal Unfitness (v. 11). He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but pled his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him. The token of His presence would be His worship with the people of Israel on this mountain.

2. The Difficulty of the People to Understand Moses' Relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer 40 years before. Since God reveals Himself under a new name as He assumes a new relationship to His people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be, and His corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty revealing to him a name different in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is, "I Am." This name is from the Hebrew word, "to be." It indicates (1) God's self-existence—the One whose very nature it is to be—the cause of all being. (2) His self-sufficiency. He said, "I Am That I Am." Since God is the unique One, He could not go outside of Himself to explain Himself; (3) His unchangeableness. What He always was and is, He evermore shall be.

3. Unbelief on the Part of the People (Exod. 4:1). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (Exod. 4:2).

4. Lack of Eloquence (Exod. 4:10). This difficulty the Lord met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron. Moses was to be in the place of God to Pharaoh and Aaron was to be his prophet (Exod. 7:1, 2).

Tiny Insects Help to Make Phonograph Records

How many realize as they listen to the phonographs in their homes that the efforts of a tiny insect working industriously in the far-away forests of India make it possible for the vast phonograph industry to place the music of the world at the command of the public?

Science having failed to produce an effective substitute, the phonograph industry must depend upon the insect known as the "lac" insect for the substance of which every record contains about 20 per cent.

These useful little creatures derive their name from the Hindu "laksh," which means a hundred thousand. They settle by the million on the young shoots of certain trees in India and suck therefrom juices which subsequently are excreted in the form of a yellow substance. This substance is gathered by natives twice a year and after being pressed and strained through muslin bags is rolled into thin sheets and sold as shellac—the material without which no phonograph record can be made satisfactorily. It acts as a binding agent in the process of making the record.

Shellac varies in color from pale amber to black. The palest shellac, known as "orange lac," is exported every year for use in the manufacture of phonograph records. The lac insect is affected by adverse weather conditions. Frost and heavy rain are invariably followed by a decrease in the yield of shellac.—Providence Journal.

Clock Saves Man's Life by Striking 13 Times

Once a clock saved a man's life by striking 13.

During the reign of William and Mary a man named John Hatfield was in the life guards. One night he was on sentry duty on the terrace at Windsor and was reported to have slept at his post. He would have been sentenced to death, but Hatfield pleaded that he was awake at midnight and heard the clock of St. Paul's strike 13. Several witnesses came forward to say that it did strike 13, and Hatfield's life was saved.

There was a good deal of discussion before the matter was settled as to whether a clock could strike 13, and also as to whether the clock of St. Paul's could possibly be heard at Windsor. In those days, of course, London was much quieter at midnight than it is now, and people were found who declared that when weather conditions were suitable they had heard it.

On the morning of March 14, 1861, Tom of Westminster, instead of striking 6, went on for 13 strokes. This caused great alarm to some people in the city, "it having always been considered that such an occurrence was of ill omen to the royal family." Their fears were realized, for the duchess of Kent, though perfectly well in the morning, died the same day.—London Tit-Bits.

Eats Thirty Meals a Day

Four stages in two months—egg, caterpillar, pupae, and adult—is the life story of the mulberry moth, or silk worm. Within three days the female lays several hundred eggs, often dying before the ordeal is completed. The moth never lives more than three days, and seldom moves more than three inches, of its own accord, during its short life. Neither the male nor the female ever eats anything; the adult's whole existence is devoted to reproduction. When it comes from the egg the caterpillar is no thicker than a hair, but it eats 30 meals a day, and at the end of 20 days it weighs about 10,000 times as much as when hatched. The essence of what went into the caterpillar as mulberry comes out as silk.

Mistaken Identity.

The hobo had asked the hard-faced woman for something to eat.

"Yes," she replied. "I'll fix you some supper of you'll saw and split some wood, sweep off the walk, fix that hole in the fence, tidy up the barnyard and burn that rubbish pile up at the cellar door."

"Lady," said the hobo as he started away, "I'm only a hobo; I ain't your husband!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Carrying Out His Ideas.

"I sent you some suggestions telling you how to make your business more successful," said the visitor. "Have you carried out any of my ideas?"

"Did you meet the office boy with the wastepaper basket as you came upstairs?" said the manager.

"Yes, yes, I did."

"Well, he was carrying out your ideas!"

His Opinion of Olive Juice.

He had finally reached the land of sunshine, fruit and cafeterias from the frozen prairies of Iowa, and was inveigled into trying a small dish of ripe olives. His verdict was: "Them things may be all right for them that likes 'em, an' I dessay they could be lived on in a pinch, but they hev got the gosh dangdest juice I ever tried to drink."

Helen—Did you take father apart to talk to him?

Henry—Not exactly, but he almost fell to pieces when I spoke to him.

Customer—Ouch! That towel is scalding hot.

Barber—Sorry, sir. I couldn't hold it any longer.

BIRD NEWS

Billie Brownie was given permission, as he so often is, by Mother Nature to visit the different birds.

You know Mother Nature has given Billie Brownie the power to understand the language of the different creatures and they tell him their stories so he can let others know of their interesting ways.

Billie Brownie was eager to call on the birds. He hadn't chatted with them for ever and ever so long.

First he had a talk with the Tree Sparrows.

We eat seeds from old weeds which we find sticking up above the snow," they told Billie Brownie. "And it is very seldom that we beg for food around houses. We can mostly always provide for ourselves."

"Now we heard of a description of sparrows as told by some one who knows all about birds," the Tree Sparrow talking explained to Billie Brownie, "and I shall give you that description for it is quite true and it was told well in human words."

"We were described as belonging to the same family as the Field Sparrows and Chipping Sparrows belong to, though the others do not stay around so much in the winter."

"Now and again we have a field sparrow for a companion as we have much the same likes and dislikes but we do feel differently about the weather."

"These are the words used to explain about us and our looks."

"Chipping Sparrow has a black bill and Field Sparrow a red one during the summer but when the fall comes their bills are dull in color and lose their summer gorgeousness."

"Field Sparrow wears a reddish coat while Chipping Sparrow wears handsome white touches above his eyes."

"Now I'm bigger in size than these other two."

"I have white touches to the wings and a dark spot in the center of my waistcoat which I call my pet spot!"

"I dearly love that spot."

"Sometimes we can sing quite sweetly. But I suppose we're not famous for our voices. Anyway they say it is nice to see us about in the winter time."

"I should say so," Billie Brownie answered, "and I thank you so much for having told me your story. It was enormously good of you."

"Delighted to tell you it," said the Tree Sparrow, with a pretty little trill to his voice.

Then Billie Brownie went to call on the Red-Breasted Nuthatch and there he heard of how these birds loved the great forest though at times they wandered off to see other places too and often they went for a trip with the Chickadee family or the White-Breasted Nuthatch.

They told Billie Brownie of the lady who always put suet on a lilac bush so that her bird friends could have nice meals all through the winter.

"We have blunt little tails and pointed bills," said the Nuthatch, "and that is really quite easy to remember. For one part of us is pointed and one is not, and that to us seems very simple."

"We don't think anyone would forget and say, 'Let us be on the look-out for the birds with blunt bills and pointed tails.'"

"No, surely they will be on the look-out for the birds with the pointed bills and the blunt tails. For these belong to the Nuthatch family."

"We of the Red-Breasted family are not so well known as the ones of the White-Breasted family. The latter are the ones about the lady's house where the suet hangs on the nearby lilac bush."

"But we have paid her a visit too."

"The White-Breasted cousins are bigger than we are. Then of course there is more reddish brown to us and more white to the cousins as you'd imagine by their names."

"Then, too, the White-Breasted cousins have white faces. And our voices are higher in pitch. Those are some of the differences."

"We hope we've told enough, Billie Brownie."

And Billie Brownie thanked them and said that now he thought he would always be able to tell the difference between the two families of Nuthatches.

"The greatest change, ma'am," said the little boy, "is the change in price."
